The Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) launched its 2025 Deferred Compensation Program Awareness Month campaign to increase participation and savings across a workforce of more than 75,000 active participants, as well as 22,000 eligible, non-participating employees. The five-week initiative combined targeted email outreach with virtual education sessions and one-on-one counseling, guiding employees from awareness to action and focusing on non-participants.

Results show strong behavior change. During the campaign, 1,660 employees enrolled in the 401(k) plan and 1,557 in the 457(b) plan, while more than 3,300 participants increased their deferral rates. Additional engagement drove 616 enrollments, 288 deferral increases, and $1.17 million in rollovers.

This effort demonstrates how coordinated communication and accessible guidance can drive measurable improvements in retirement readiness at scale.

Project summary

Plan profile

The Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) Deferred Compensation Program includes 401(k) and 457(b) plans serving a workforce of more than 100,000 employees across the Greater New York City region. The program provides employees with tools, education, and personalized support to improve retirement readiness.

Background and need

The MTA serves a large, diverse, and operationally complex workforce, creating ongoing challenges in driving consistent retirement plan engagement. While the plan has long emphasized participation and savings, opportunities remained to further increase enrollment among nonparticipating employees and encourage higher deferral rates among active participants. In addition, ensuring employees understand and utilize available tools and counseling resources remained a priority.

Goals

- Increase plan participation among eligible employees
- Increase participant deferral rates
- Expand engagement with retirement tools and resources
- Increase utilization of counseling services

Commentary

"Communicating successfully to MTA's large, complex, and extremely diverse workforce is always a challenge, so this campaign — which was intended to drive retirement readiness — required more than just broad communication. We focused on reaching employees where they are, guiding them from awareness to action through targeted messaging and personalized support, and helping thousands take measurable steps to strengthen their retirement savings."

– Nicole LaMorte, Director, Tax Favored Programs

Written justification

Project overview and purpose

The MTA's 2025 Deferred Compensation Program Awareness Month campaign is a coordinated, five-week initiative designed to drive measurable improvements in retirement plan participation and savings behavior across a large and diverse workforce. Building on prior years' efforts, the campaign reflects an intentional evolution in how the MTA engages employees, shifting from broad awareness to a more structured approach that guides participants toward action.

Recognizing that awareness alone does not consistently lead to behavior change, the MTA aligned its strategy to focus on enrollment, increased deferrals, and direct engagement with available resources, particularly among employees not currently participating in the plan.

Timeline and execution

The campaign was executed over a five-week period beginning in late March 2025. Each week featured a distinct communication focus, supported by coordinated outreach and engagement activities.

A series of five targeted email campaigns served as the backbone of the initiative:

- Week 1: Campaign kickoff and awareness
- Week 2: Enrollment with targeted outreach to nonparticipating employees
- Week 3: Promotion of retirement counseling sessions
- Week 4: Online tools and resources
- Week 5: Retirement readiness

These communications were reinforced by virtual group meetings and one-on-one counseling sessions, providing employees with opportunities to take immediate action following engagement.

This level of coordination required alignment across communication channels, counseling resources, and internal stakeholders to deliver a consistent experience at scale across tens of thousands of employees.

How the campaign worked

The campaign was designed as a coordinated engagement journey, using sequenced messaging to guide employees from initial awareness to concrete action. Each communication built on the previous one, reinforcing key concepts while directing employees toward specific next steps, such as enrolling, increasing contributions, or meeting with a counselor.

Outreach was intentionally focused on employees based on their level of engagement with the plan and included targeted communication to nonparticipating employees. This ensured that messaging remained relevant and actionable rather than broad and generalized.

A key differentiator of the campaign was the integration of digital outreach with immediate access to personalized support. Employees were not only encouraged to take action, but they were also provided direct opportunities to do so through virtual meetings and one-on-one counseling, reducing friction between intent and execution.

Government staff leadership

MTA staff played a central role in the development and execution of the campaign, providing oversight, strategic direction, and coordination across communication and engagement channels. Internal teams worked closely with partners to align messaging, ensure accuracy, and support the delivery of a consistent participant experience.

This collaboration enabled the campaign to be executed at scale while maintaining a focus on participant needs and plan objectives.

Results

The campaign generated strong engagement and measurable improvements in participant behavior.

Engagement

Five campaign emails were delivered to more than 75,000 participants, with at least 44% of recipients opening each message. Individual campaign open rates ranged from 44% to 54%.

Enrollment growth

During the campaign period:

- 1,660 employees newly enrolled in the 401(k) plan
- 1,557 employees newly enrolled in the 457(b) plan

Savings behavior

- More than 3,300 participants increased their deferral rates across both plans
- Average contribution rates remained stable across both plans, even as thousands of new participants entered the program

Participation

Participation rates increased across both plans during the campaign period. In the 401(k) plan, the percentage of participants with a balance increased from 66% to 68% while the number of eligible nonparticipating employees declined. Similarly, in the 457(b) plan, participation increased from 49% to 51%, reflecting a meaningful reduction in non-participation across the workforce.

Counseling and direct engagement

- 22 virtual group meetings with 497 attendees
- 1,291 one-on-one counseling sessions conducted

These interactions resulted in:

- 616 new enrollments
- 288 deferral increases
- 52 rollovers totaling approximately $1.17 million
- 342 beneficiary updates

These outcomes reflect not only strong engagement, but meaningful behavior change, with thousands of employees taking concrete steps to improve their retirement readiness during a defined campaign period.

Feasibility and replicability

The MTA's campaign model is highly scalable and can be adapted by other public sector plans. The structure relies on a coordinated combination of email communication, education sessions, and counseling support, all of which can be implemented using existing plan resources.

Key elements that support replication include:

- A structured, multiweek communication strategy.
- Targeted outreach based on participant status.
- Integration of digital and human engagement channels.

This approach allows plans of varying sizes to tailor messaging while maintaining a consistent framework for driving participant action.
